TURKS GET TERMS FROM THE ALLIES.

Must Recognize The Right Of Armenians To A National Home.

LONDON, Mar. 13.—The Allied Supreme Council yesterday afternoon handed the Greek and Turkish delegations in London the proposals it has formulated as a basis of settlement with a view to the establishment of peace in the near East. The Turks were told the Allies were prepared to facilitate the admission of Turkey into the League of Nations on conditions that they be given proof of the readiness of the Turks to execute the peace treaty as modified. The Turks were asked to recognize the right of Turkish Armenians to a national home on the eastern frontier of Turkey in Asia and to agree to accept the decision of the Commission appointed by the League of Nations on the question of the territory to be transferred to Armenia for this purpose. The Turks protested against the maintenance of a Greek garrison in Smyrna and recalled that they had accepted the proposed Commission for Eastern Thrace. The Turkish delegates cast on Greece the responsibility for delaying peace. It is understood they will lay the Allied proposals before Sublime Porte in Constantinople and the Nationalist Assembly in Angora. Premier Lloyd George said the new proposals must be examined as a whole without reference to previous proposals.

The Nationalists and Majority Socialists voted with the Government Bloc. Communist resolutions demanding immediate establishment of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia was decisively defeated.

Imported German Goods To Pay 50 per cent. For Reparations.

A Bill Is Introduced Into The House Of Commons.

LONDON, Mar. 13.—The text of the German reparations Bill providing for fifty per cent. levy on the purchase price of imported German goods to be applied to reparations which was formally introduced in the House of Commons Friday, was made public yesterday. The bill described German goods to which the act shall be applied as "Goods first consigned from Germany to the United Kingdom and goods not so consigned, being goods wholly manufactured or produced in Germany or goods partly so manufactured produced where less than twenty-five per cent. of the value there is attributable to manufacture or production in any country outside Germany." The act, however, will not apply to goods imported for exportation after transit through United Kingdom or by way of transshipment. The bill provides that importers of German goods shall pay "such proportion of value of goods not exceeding fifty per cent. as the treasury may prescribe." In case goods are sent to Germany for finishing process the tax will apply only to the process. Tax commissioners are empowered by the measure to require the importer to furnish particulars as to the country of manufacture and if these should be unsatisfactory, goods shall be deemed to be of German origin. The High Court may annul, vary or suspend contracts entered into before March 8th, if it is satisfied the bill will make it a hardship to carry them out.

THE ETERNAL TRIANGLE

CHAPTER XLII.

Becoming Suspicious.

The time had been when he had never left the house without saying something about where he was going; now his absences were long, and she did not know where his time was spent.

Lady Lanswell noticed the unusual shadow on the girl's sweet face, and in her quick, impetuous way asked her about it.

"Marion, you are anxious or thoughtful—which is it?" she asked.

"Thoughtful," said Lady Chandos. "I am not anxious, not at all."

"Of what are you thinking, that it brings a shadow on that dear face of yours?" said Lady Lanswell, kindly.

Lady Chandos turned to her, in a low tone of voice said:

"Has Lance any very old intimate friends in London?"

"No; none that I know of. He knows a great many people, of course, and some very intimately, but I am not aware of any especial friendship. Why do you ask me?"

"I fancied he had; he is so much more from home than he used to be, and does not say where he goes."

"My dear Marion," said the countess, kindly, "Lance has many occupations and many cares; he cannot possibly tell you every detail of how and where he passes the time. Let me give you a little warning, never give way to any suspicious of your husband; that is always the beginning of domestic misery; trust him all in all. Lance is loyal and true to you; do not tease him with suspicious and little jealousies."

"I am not jealous," said Lady Chandos, "but it seems to me only natural that I should like to know where my husband passes his time."

The elder and wiser woman thought to herself, with a sigh, that it might be quite as well that she should not know.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"Death Ends Everything."

MADAME VANIRA became one of the greatest features of the day. Her beauty and her singing made her the wonder of the world. Royalty delighted to honour her. One evening after she had entranced a whole audience, keeping them hanging, as it were, on every silvery note that came from her lovely lips—people were almost wild over her—they had called her until they were tired. Popular enthusiasm had never been so gaudy. And then Royal lips praised her and the highest personage in the land presented her with a diamond bracelet worthy of the honor and the recipient. Her triumph was at its height; that night the opera in which she played the "Crown Diamonds." Her singing was most perfect, her acting magnificent; she had electrified the audience as no other artist living could have done; her passion, her power, her genius had carried them with her. When she quitted the stage it was as though they woke from a long trance of delight.

That evening crowned her "Queen of Song." No one who saw her ever forgot her. The next morning the papers raved about her; they prophesied a new era for music and for the stage; it was, perhaps the most triumphant night of her great career. She had the gift which makes an actress or a singer; she could impress her individuality on people; she made a mark on the hearts and minds of those who saw her that was never effaced; her gestures, her face, her figure, her magnificent attitudes stood out vivid and clear while they lived distinct from any others.

"Where royalty smiled, other people laugh," says the old proverb. No sooner was it known that the warmest praise kindly and royal lips could give had been given to Madame Vanira then she became at once the darling of the world of fashion.

Invitations poured in upon her the most princely mansions in London were thrown open to her; the creme de la creme of the elite sought her eagerly; there was nothing like her; her beauty and her genius enthralled every one. The time came when she was the most popular and the most eagerly sought after in London, yet she cared little for society; her art was the one thing she lived for, and her friendship with Lord Chandos. One day she said to him:

"I have never seen Lady Marion. What is she like?"

He noticed then and afterwards that she never spoke of the queen of blondes as Lady Chandos, or as "your wife," but always as Lady Marion.

This was a beautiful morning in May and there, sitting under the great cedar-trees on the lawn all the sweet-smelling wind wafting luscious odors from jasmine and honeysuckle, the brilliant sun shining down on them he had been reading to her the notes of a speech by which he hoped to do wonders; she had suggested some alterations, and, as he found, improvements; then she sat silently musing. After some time she startled him with the question:

"What is Lady Marion like?"

"Did you not see her," he replied "on the first evening we were at the opera? She was by my side, and you saw me. Nay, I remember that she told me you were looking at her, and that your eyes magnetized hers."

"I remember the evening," said Leone sadly, "but I do not remember seeing my lady. I—I saw nothing but you. Tell me what she is like. Is she very beautiful?" she asked and the tone of her voice was very wistful.

"Yes; she is very fine and queenly," he replied: "she is very quiet, gentle, and amiable. Would you like to see her, Leone?"

A sudden flame of passion flashed in those dark eyes and then died away.

"Yes, I should like just once to see her. She is very clever, is she not?"

"Yes, in a quiet way. She plays beautifully, and she composes pretty airs to pretty words."

Leone looked up, with vivid interest in her face.

"Does she? Ah, that is greater art than being able to sing the music another has written."

"I do not think so," he replied. "If you are thinking of Lady Marion in comparison with yourself, there is no comparison; it is like moonlight and sunlight, water and wine. She has the grace and calm of repose. You mere handful of dust and ashes some day," she said.

Then Lord Chandos rose from his seat with a shudder.

"Let us go out into the sunlight," he said. How you have changed! I can remember when you never had a dull thought."

"I can remember when I had no cause for dull thoughts," she answered. Then fancying that the words implied some little reproach to him, she continued, hastily. "My soul has grown larger, and the larger one's soul the more one suffers. I have understood more of human nature since I have represented the woes of others."

He glanced at her with sudden interest.

"Which, of all characters you represent, do you prefer?" he asked.

"I can hardly tell you. I like Norma very much—the stately, proud, loving woman, who has struggled so much with her pride, with her sense of duty with her sacred character, who fought human love inch by inch, who yielded at last; who made the greatest sacrifice a woman could make, who risked her life and dearer than her life for her love. All the passion and power in my nature rises to that character."

"That is easily seen," he replied. "There have been many Normas, but none like you."

Her face brightened; it was so sweet to be praised by him!

"And then," she continued, "the grand tragedy of passion and despair, the noble, queenly woman who has sacrificed everything to the man she loves finds that she has a rival—a young beautiful, beloved rival." She clasped her hands with the manner of a queen. "My whole soul rises to that," she continued: "I understand it—the passion, the anguish, the despair!"

His dark eyes, full of admiration, were riveted on her.

"Who would have thought," he said, gravely "that you had such a marvel of genius in you?"

THE TOP DOG

If you are the top dog, and have won Good Fortune's smile;

If all the blessings that you wish come to you all the while;

If food and raiment trouble not, your coffers flowing o'er;

If you can buy the very best from your increasing store—

Just look around you and beneath for one who needs your aid.

For one who, ever in the depths, Good Luck seems to evade.

Look round and view this luckless one with sympathetic eyes.

Then reach a paw and help the struggling bottom dog to rise.

There may have been a bygone time when you were struggling there;

When you, too, in the toil of Life, stood in and took your share.

When, buffeted and torn by Fate, you needed someone near

To raise and lift you from the mire and speak a word of cheer.

And if that help was given to you, in measure great or small,

If you have reached to dizzy heights where once you feared to fall,

Then view the struggling bottom dog with sympathetic eyes.

And lend a paw to help the poor unfortunate to rise.

have the fire of genius before which everything grows pale. She quiets a man's heart. You stir every pulse in it. She soothes one into forgetfulness of life. You brace and animate and brighten. You cannot compare the two characters, because they are quite different. You are smiling. What amuses you?"

"Nothing. I was not amused, Lord Chandos. I was thinking, and the thought I smiled over was not amusing."

"What was it?"

"I was thinking of how it would be the same the end of all; all grace, gifts, and talents; all beauty and genius. I read some lines yesterday that have haunted me ever since. Shall I repeat them to you?"

"It is always a great treat to hear you recite poetry," he replied. "I shall be only too delighted."

Her beautiful face grew more beautiful and more earnest, as it always did under the influence of noble words. Her voice was sweeter than that of a singing-bird and stirred every pulse in the heart of the listener as she recited this little poem:

"While roses are so red,
While lilies are so white,
Shall a woman exalt her face
Because it gives delight?
She's not so sweet as a rose,
A lily is straighter than she,
And if she were as red or white,
She'd be but one of three."

"Whether she flush in love's summer,
Or in its winter grow pale,
Whether she flaunt her beauty,
Or hide it in a veil;
Be she red or white,
And stand she erect or bowed
Time will win the race he runs with her,
And hide her away in a shroud."

"These words took my fancy Lord Chandos," continued Leone; "they are so terribly true. All grace and beauty will be hidden away some day in a shroud."

"There will be no shroud for the soul," he said.

She rose from her seat and looked with a weary sigh.

"That is true. After all, nothing matters; death ends everything; nothing matters except being good and going to heaven."

He smiled half sadly at her.

"Those are grave thoughts for the most brilliant beauty, the most gifted singer, the most popular queen of the day," he said.

"The brilliant beauty will be a

YESTERDAY AT ST. THOMAS'S

Yesterday began the parochial mission at St. Thomas's. At the Corporate Communion there was a good muster of the men of the parish; and at the late morning service, Canon Balt gave the concluding address of a series of sermons on The Way to Reunion, which have been the means of giving a good deal of enlightenment on this important subject. At the offertory at this service the Hymn "There is a Green Hill far away." Miss Jones taking the solo part.

At 4.30 the first service of the Mission proper was held, a service very simple in construction, but far more appropriate for its purpose than Evensong. A short instruction on "What it is to be a Christian," was followed by the third of the series of sermons on "Religion in Modern Literature," this one being on Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter." Rev. Dr. Jones defined Roger Chillingworth as an example of the power of sin; the Preacher Dimsdale as an example of the guilt of sin; Hester Prynne as an example of the stain of sin; and drew some solemn lessons from the story. The one defect in the book, from the Christian's point of view, is that while sin is depicted, and repentance shadowed forth, there is no message of a Saviour. At the close of the service Rev. C. A. Moulton sang the sacred song Galilee.

This morning at the 6.45 service there was a large congregation who met to plead in the Sacramental Presence of Jesus. The Rector gave a short address on Prayer. There will be service at 6.45, 3 and 8 daily for the coming two weeks.

Destiny's dice box decrees that to every person there be given one particular thing that he or she can do better than any other. To Mrs. Horatio N. Every face is smiling, but every smile is individually different. Every head has a personality all its own. All are useful and practical. On the top of the head of one is a place for a pen, a pencil and an eraser. On the head of another is a place for cigarettes and a self-lighting holder. Still another head proved to be a bank, with a slit in the mouth in which to insert the coin. "A DAUGHTER OF ERIN"

Thrills, Heart-Throbs, And Whole-some Comedy In R.L.S. Players' Production.

Frank Lavender, a young London artist, and his chum, Capt. Ingram, are touring Ireland, and the magnificent scenery of the Island of Borvo appeals so much to Lavender that they decide to spend a few days there. The particular attraction however to both of them is Sheila, daughter of Con O'Grady known as the king of Borvo. Lavender succeeds in winning her affections greatly to the disappointment of Capt. Ingram.

The second act shows Lavender's apartment in London a few months afterwards, where, due to the sneers and chicanery of Ingram, the husband begins to chafe about the lowliness of his wife's birth and her utter lack of interest in the doings of the smart set. They are visited by Lavender's eccentric but very rich old aunt upon whom he is dependent. She is at once charmed by the beautiful simplicity of Sheila's character, and when Lavender in a fit of anger cruelly wounds the tender heart of his young wife, the old aunt comes to her rescue and refuses to have anything further to do with her nephew. Sorrowful and repentant, young Lavender enlists in the Navy as an ordinary A.B. and an evil fate finds him assigned to the same ship of which his pseudo-friend Ingram is captain. If Lavender is disposed of, Ingram sees his opportunity of winning Sheila and the fortune which the old aunt has willed her. How he is thwarted by Teddy Reilly and his sweet-heart Nora (who furnish the comedy) gives a thrilling climax such as is not usually witnessed in modern dreams. "A Daughter of Erin" is a play full of heart throbs, thrills, and mirth provoking situations which will delight capacity audiences on St. Patrick's afternoon and night at the Casino.

"I never worry," exclaimed the optimist. "What? Never?" queried the pessimist. "No; during the day I'm too busy, and at night I'm too sleepy."

Why do that the world would be filled with the knowledge and practice of love and service to each other; then finally there would be One Fold and One Shepherd, Jesus Christ Our Lord. The service ended, the Society formed two-deep, and in procession proceeded to Barr'd Islands, after which to Joe Batt's Arm, across the arm over the ice to the South Side, and from thence back to the Lodge, where a fastidious tea was prepared for them by the good ladies of C. THE HR. MAIN RESULT

Harbor Main has decided to remain with the Tory Opposition, Dr. Jones and Capt. Lewis receiving the majority of votes at the bye-election on Saturday. During the past 36 hours we had become aware of this, and become aware that the result is not one brought about by fair political means but by the intensive sectarian campaign used by the Cashin Tory Party during the past week and particularly at the meetings on Friday, which had special reference to what the Tories called "the Protestant Party." Hr. Main had an opportunity to put a nail in the coffin of sectarianism, but instead of taking advantage of the offer, listened to the "whisperings" of the Tory Party and gave new life to what should have been frowned down upon by everyone who has any love for his country. The Hr. Main electors have been used by the Tory Party to play a dangerous game. It is a game that puts the Cashin Party out of the running forever. Hr. Main's decision only serves to solidify the Government forces and makes the Party stronger than ever in the country, and that district has put itself in opposition not only for three years but for seven years at least. The Tories have forced this issue, and it is just as well that it should be recognized that they have done so. When a man will ask that prayers should be made against a Protestant Government, surely things have come to a pretty pass. Mr. Furey's messages concerning the sectarian campaign carry also the comment that it "fell flat." We can well realize that Mr. Furey this morning knows that it did not "fall flat."

As a vote of want of confidence in the Government, the decision fails, in that while the Tory vote remains stationary, the Liberal vote shows a gain of about 100 votes.

We congratulate Messrs. Hawco and Furey on the splendid fight which they have put up in Hr. Main. They have fought a clean, open, fair and honest fight, one of which they need not to be ashamed, and they doubtless would rather be defeated than be elected by such means as was used by the Tory Party to elect their two nominees.

COAKER'S POLICY IS TO PAY FISHERMEN GOOD PRICES

The following letter written to the "Daily News," appears in that paper this morning and we reprint it for general information.

March 11, 1921.

Editor The "Daily News,"

Dear Sir,—In your issue of yesterday you ask me to state what has become of the sale Mr. Coaker made to The Mercantile Co., of Oporto, of 175,000 qtls. of fish.

I may say in discussing this matter with you, I am doing so from a business standpoint as I see it, and not with any political tinge, as I am not in politics and do not wish to be.

My connection with Mr. Coaker and the Fishermen's Union Trading Co., is that of a shareholder who wishes to see his investment protected. Your view is entirely different. With you it is politics entirely, and at this time when you are endeavouring to give Harbour Main some "fireworks" I will overlook the unkindly and antagonistic spirit in which you write, and tell you calmly what became of the sale in question. Shipment on which went forward regularly and outright cash sales completed of eleven cargoes by Mr. Coaker, at 50 and 60 shillings, including one cargo each from A. E. Hickman and J. C. Carter, two of his greatest opponents, and these cash sales would have continued to go forward and the whole contract finalized had Mr. Coaker received any support from here.

Instead of support, the whole fabric he erected was knocked down by the Fish Exporters passing Resolutions to lift the Regulations, which undermined the foundation on which the sale was made. Now let us analyze the situation.

Mr. Coaker cabled he could sell all our fish suitable for the Portugal market on two conditions:

- 1st. That all sales be made through Marine & Fishery Department.
- 2nd. The price of consigned fish be controlled as it was being sold much under the price he could obtain.

These conditions were agreed to and shipments were going forward under them, when the Mercantile Company complained to Mr. Coaker that prices were not being maintained on consigned fish. Coaker cabled for each shipper to notify their consignees that unless they obtained 50 and 60 shillings they would be held responsible for these prices in account sales.

This the shippers absolutely refused to do, which left the mercantile open to cancel their contract, which they requested Coaker to do.

One of the outstanding clauses in the agreement was the control of all cargoes of Oporto fish by the Department. This had to be effected before they would consider the purchase, as they did not want a dozen cargoes on hand at 50 and 60 shillings which they were guaranteeing and then for the market to break as it might if all shipments were not under government control, so as to prevent glutting of the market.

The first prop was knocked from under Coaker's bargain by the shippers when they refused to control price of consigned fish, the next by the shippers when they passed a resolution to lift the Regulations and control of shipments killing the two conditions on which sale was made.

You will naturally ask why the shippers would do anything so foolish as to kill this splendid bargain Coaker had made and which started off so well as to place eleven cargoes under it.

There are several reasons for the shippers' action. First, they do not want the regulations another year, and if they could not kill Coaker's sale it would mean they (the Regulations) would be continued. The Exporters feel the regulations made them pay the fishermen too much for fish last year that they can do a safer business when buying fish at a low price as there is not the same risk attached. This is why they want the Regulations removed.

Mr. Coaker's policy is, pay the fishermen a good price and by co-operation the Exporters can obtain good prices, cut out consignments and make money for all concerned.

The two courses are still open to debate. It is reasonable to say the regulations did not receive a fair chance this year. The Italian market was made impossible by the Press and opponents of the Regulations.

Exchange was a great factor against high prices; then several years catch of Norwegian fish resold by the British government dumped in our markets at any price obtainable, had a demoralizing effect.

Mostly all the parties foremost in killing the Oporto sale had no Oporto fish, and others prominent in the movement only one cargo and less, which has not yet been shipped. These considered if the Regulations were lifted immediately price of all fish at Oporto would slump and go into consumption during Lent, when by the time their cargoes would get over the market would be stronger.

As to the value of the regulations, we should not overlook Messrs. Harris & Sellars' messages after full investigation.

Mr. Harris cabled:—"Strongly urge you oppose lifting regulations. It is absolutely necessary all sailings be held up until April, this will benefit all cargoes here and all to come over."

Mr. Sellars cabled:—"Firmly convinced situation can only be saved by maintaining regulations, lifting them now would be disastrous."

What better proof of the benefit of the Regulations does any one want than these messages from expert men who went to Oporto specially to study the situation.

Regarding the "Eileen Lake," when you cast suspicions on anyone in connection with her clearance you cast it on Mr. Hal Hutchings, Deputy Minister of Marine & Fisheries. Anyone knowing this obliging, manly, straightforward young gentleman will consider "you're hitting below the belt." Mr. Hutchings is responsible for the clearance of the "Lake" and claims he acted within his rights, that the Advisory Board arranged her date of sailing and clearance was given on date arranged and gazetted.

The technical point raised is, that before clearance was issued Mr. Hutchings should have notified the Chairman of the Advisory Board. This rule did apply before date of sailings were arranged by the Board, but after they had determined the sailing dates and quantity for each cargo, there was no need of Mr. Hutchings advising the Chairman of Sailings; he (the Chairman) had already arranged.

I was not aware the "Lake" had left Port Union the morning of the meeting when this technical point came up, and on which the vessel is now detained.

The Captain thought he should be allowed to sail and stated he would go, finally he agreed to remain, thinking the Exporters would see the injustice of detaining him. At 8 p.m. the day of the meeting he called me by phone to say he was sailing at 11 p.m. I then called Hon. W. R. Warren and informed him of the Captain's decision. This caused the officers to be placed on board, not because anything suspicious was done but simply to satisfy the same exporters who are responsible for the Regulations, and who voted prices and conditions into existence at their first meeting held last year, September 4th, held in the Board of Trade rooms.

It is regrettable they are now all pulling apart, each having his own little axe to grind and looking for some one to blame, if they did not get all they hoped for when they unanimously voted the regulations and prices into being.

Thanking you in advance, Mr. Editor, for publishing this letter which you requested me to write.

I remain,

Yours very truly,

E. COLLISHAW.

Mr. Collishaw's Letter

Time and space do not permit of comment upon Mr. Collishaw's letter giving in an adjoining column. To-morrow we shall deal with the Oporto contract, the "Lake" and other matters in a manner which will show our readers many things, and show the fishermen why the merchants now want to take off Regulations.

The "News" outfit can discuss Mr. Coaker's position once again. It will do Mr. Coaker good to have him advertised; for it is just possible that those who read it will overlook the source from which it comes and believe it anyhow.

The Woes of Mrs. Newlywed

"How may I clean my natural table, which has become badly spoiled?" asked Mrs. Newlywed. "Oil and turpentine or wood alcohol are good to clean such a table. Rub it well with a woolen cloth, wet in turpentine, afterward polishing with paraffine oil," said Mrs. Neighbor.

The Sickbed Lady

When one is ill the food that is served to them should be of an entirely different nature than when they are well and can take exercise and go out in the fresh air. Nurse gives recipes for a few dishes that she often uses. Clam broth is very easily digested and is quite nourishing as well. Wash a quart of clams in the shell. Cover the bottom of a pan large enough to hold the clams with cold water. Place the clams in this, cover and heat gradually until the clams open. Strain through a piece of cheesecloth.

Toast water is made by taking thin slices of stale bread, dried well in a slow oven until crisp and brown. Break them into small pieces, and to a measure of bread, add an equal amount of boiling water. Let this stand one hour. Strain through a piece of cheesecloth, season with salt and serve either hot or cold.

Lemonade is often given and the acid in many cases is splendid for a sick person. It is good in cases of biliousness and can be taken into the system in this way once a day at least. For lemonade, to one tablespoon of lemon juice, add two tablespoons of syrup made by boiling one cup of water and half a cup of sugar five minutes. Add enough water to fill.

Proper Manners

"I met a young man friend of a friend of mine when visiting. He has asked about me. Should I write to him or await his action?" asked Gladys.

"Let him ask permission to write or meet you through your friend. You may send your regards to him through your friend, but let him take the first action toward a closer acquaintance," said her friend.

Boys and Girls

When a child has the earache, heat applied to the ear is the safest thing to do at once. Either hot flannels may be applied or a hot water bottle. A bag of hot sand is also a good thing to apply to the outside of the ear. If this does not ease the pain, syringe out the ear with hot water, as hot as the fingers can bear when dipped into it.

Never drop oil or anything else into the ear. If a baby is subject to earache do not allow the attacks to continue without having a doctor examine the ear. If there is a discharge syringing should be done with hot boric acid solution in the proportion of a teaspoon of the acid to a pint of hot water. This should be applied often enough to keep the ear clean. Dry the ear carefully afterward.

When a child gets a cut, if it is a simple one, wash it with clean cold water or a cold saturated solution of boric acid. Then apply a piece of sterilized gauze made into a pad, so that the pressure of this pad will tend to stop the bleeding. Tie up with another clean piece of cloth.

Boys and Girls

When a child has the earache, heat applied to the ear is the safest thing to do at once. Either hot flannels may be applied or a hot water bottle. A bag of hot sand is also a good thing to apply to the outside of the ear. If this does not ease the pain, syringe out the ear with hot water, as hot as the fingers can bear when dipped into it.

Never drop oil or anything else into the ear. If a baby is subject to earache do not allow the attacks to continue without having a doctor examine the ear. If there is a discharge syringing should be done with hot boric acid solution in the proportion of a teaspoon of the acid to a pint of hot water. This should be applied often enough to keep the ear clean. Dry the ear carefully afterward.

When a child gets a cut, if it is a simple one, wash it with clean cold water or a cold saturated solution of boric acid. Then apply a piece of sterilized gauze made into a pad, so that the pressure of this pad will tend to stop the bleeding. Tie up with another clean piece of cloth.

ENJOYS HEALTH FIRST TIME IN FIFTEEN YEARS

Montreal Man Ached From Head To Foot With Rheumatism—Troubles Entirely Overcome By Tanlac.

"I'm now a well man, for the first time in fifteen years," said Edmond St. Pierre, 209 St. Christopher St., Montreal, in relating his experience with Tanlac recently. Mr. St. Pierre is a well known tailor, having followed his trade for the past thirty years.

"Some fifteen years or more ago my stomach commenced bothering me. Then I got to having rheumatism, and at the time I got Tanlac I had been in bed for four weeks, scarcely able to move, and my whole body ached and pained me all the time. I think I had indigestion about as bad as a person can and live. I had no appetite at all, and for days at a time my stomach was so upset I couldn't eat a mouthful. When I did force down a little something, it soured and bloated me until I thought my heart would quit beating, and I could hardly get my breath. Many a night I spent sitting in a chair, just gasping for breath and suffering agony. My arms, legs and shoulders swelled terribly with rheumatism, and my wrists and fingers got so stiff I couldn't use them at all, and often couldn't raise my hands to my face.

"Well, this was the fix I was in when I started taking Tanlac, and I was so bad off it took a little time for me to feel much benefit. However, I stuck to Tanlac, and it certainly has made a clean sweep of my troubles. Now my appetite is simply enormous, and everything agrees with me so well I've picked up several pounds in weight. In fact, my stomach trouble and rheumatism are entirely gone, and I can work with satisfaction and really enjoy life. My recovery has been wonderful, and Tanlac gets all the credit for it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Musgrave Harbor by T. W. Currie, in Joe Batt's Arm by Michael Hackitt, in New Perlican by E. J. Green, in Point aux Gauls by Edgar Hillier, in Dildo by Samuel J. Pretty, in Glovertown by Daniel Burton, in Old Perlican by Moses Hursey, in Lewisporte by Uriah Proulx, in Holyrood by William Coady, in Morton's Harbor by A. W. Brett, in St. Brendan's by Wm. F. Hynes, in Bonne Bay by Butte Bros., in Brent's Cove by Jeremiah A. Sullivan, in Port Anson by Warrick W. Wellman.

IRISH NIGHT

The annual "Irish Night" an entertainment always looked forward to with pleasurable anticipation by the theatre goers, will be held in the Methodist College Hall this year under the auspices of the Columbus Ladies Association, with Mrs. C. J. Cahill in charge of the programme which will be believed even excell those of former years. Those participating include: Mesdames Garland, Small Christian and Cahill; Misses Brown, Herder, Ryan and Eagan; Messrs. Karl Trappnell and L. Woods. Additional attractions will be recitations by Miss Keegan, Messrs. T. H. O'Neill and P. Halley; a trio by Messrs. Wallace Jardine and Hickey; quartette by Messrs. Trappnell, Herder Fox and Woods; violin solo by Mrs. (Dr.) Murphy and dance by Miss Mary Halley. Mr. Gordon Christian is acting as accompanist.

SEALING LIAR BUSY

The sealing liar was pretty busy Saturday night and yesterday and as a result the public was treated to several scare stories of accidents to different ships of the fleet. The Ranger was reported with her propeller gone while a collision between the Eagle and Seal was also reported, but neither of these stories had a semblance of truth to account for their being circulated. The latest report from the steamers is that they are about 70 miles S.E. of the Funks.

ICEMEN'S BENEFIT

The icemen's benefit takes place in the Prince's Rink to-night, and an interesting program has been prepared. A ladies' hockey match between teams from the Methodist and Bishop Spencer Colleges will be amongst the evening's attractions. These teams have played two games during the season, and are now equal, having won one each, and the championship will be decided to-night. The Inter-Collegiate and League hockey relay races, will also be interesting whilst a large number have entered for the one mile All-Comers. The 3 mile championship race will also be a big event the following having entered, Messrs. J. Hackett, G. Squires, J. Bell, H. Crawford and E. Churchill. Ex-Champion T. Woods was also entered, but owing to being indisposed, he will not be taking part. The final event will be a hockey match between two teams picked from the League. After the programme, there will be general skating, and the Terra Nova Band will be in attendance during the evening.

LECTURE TO BE REPEATED

Dr. J. S. Tait has been requested, and has consented to repeat his lecture on "Science, its progress and promise," delivered before the Llewellyn Club recently, and will address the general public on the above subject at the Grenfell Hall, Seamen's Institute, on Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Tait is giving his lecture in the interests and for the instruction of the community, and it embraces the advance of science during the past half century. There will be no charge for admission, neither will any collection be taken up. All are welcome.

Scott, eldest son of Magistrate and Mrs. Scott, of Curling, who is doing business in Moose Jaw, Sask., came east on business to Toronto, Montreal and other places and intended to visit home after seven years' absence, but on arrival at New Glasgow, where a brother of Mrs. Scott is living he found it was almost impossible to reach Newfoundland, and had to defer his visit to a later date.

HAD QUICK TRIP

The schr. Herbert Warren, Capt. Gerald Power, was towed to port by the Ingraham yesterday from Trepassy where she harbored several days ago on her arrival from Pernambuco in ballast to Messrs. James Baird, Ltd. The Warren left here for Brazil with a fish cargo early in January and made the run to Pernambuco in the excellent time of 35 days. She experienced little delay in disposing of her cargo and got back to this coast in 38 days, thus making the round trip in something like eight weeks. Capt. Power who thus completed an eminently successful maiden voyage as master, is to be congratulated on his splendid work and his many friends trust that his first trip in charge has been but the forerunner of marked success for the future.

CHAS. H. HUTCHINGS, Inspector General.

On Saturday morning at 3 o'clock sparks from the forecable stove-pipe of the Max Horton, which was anchored in the stream, caught the stowaway blaze from which was seen from the King's Wharf by police officers making their rounds. The officers with the Customs boat men put off to the vessel and extinguished the blaze which, but for their timely intervention might have been serious results.

WANTS GOOD REFEREE
It has been suggested that Mr. W. J. Higgins be asked to referee the hockey game between the Feildians and Terra Novas to-morrow night. The game is an important one and good refereeing is essential to give entire satisfaction to those concerned.

A POWERFUL SERMON

Rev. R. J. Power, the new pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, delivered a powerful sermon last evening on the life and work of Ireland's Patron, St. Patrick. Rev. Mr. Power, who is himself a native of the Emerald Isle, treated his subject in a manner that rendered his discourse extremely interesting, all the more so because St. Patrick, as the preacher pointed out was born in Scotland!

HOLY CROSS SCHOOLS

Yesterday forenoon another largely attended meeting of the Committee having in hand the liquidation of the Holy Cross Schools was held in the school rooms, Mr. John Barron presiding. It was an enthusiastic gathering and all arrangements were finalized for St. Patrick's Day. A series of card tournaments will be held in the afternoon and during the night. In the latter period supper will be served and the committee are assured that a large number will participate. During Easter week there will be a series of concerts and entertainments and a number of excellent vocalists and instrumentalists will take part.

THE MAYOR WRITES

(To the Editor.)
Dear Sir,—In a letter to the "Daily News" this morning the Inspector General complains apparently of the non-publication of his letter. The Council had not the slightest intention of withholding his communication, but as they had not an opportunity of considering it until Thursday's meeting, it was decided to prepare a reply and publish it with his letter at the earliest moment.

The Inspector General's assumption that the Commissioners did not see fit to investigate the statements of the City Engineer before publishing his report is entirely incorrect. The Council is fully convinced that his report was correct in all essentials. There appears to be some divergence of evidence as to details which will be investigated.

Yours truly,
W. G. GOSLING.

B. I. S. PARADE

At a meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society held yesterday afternoon arrangements were made for the annual St. Patrick's Day parade. The program arranged is for the Society to proceed from their hall to St. Patrick's to pay the usual call at the Deanery and to return via Water Street and Cochrane St. to Government House to meet His Excellency the Governor. From Government House the parade will proceed to the R. C. Cathedral, where the Society will attend 11 o'clock Mass, afterwards calling on His Grace the Archbishop.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY CONCERT

A number of the leading male vocalists in the city are busy practising for a grand concert to be given at the Methodist College Hall on St. George's Day, April 23rd. The concert promises to be a musical treat of a very high order and will be modelled on the same lines as the concerts given by the Royal Welsh Singers at the same hall some years ago. A very ambitious programme is being prepared, consisting of Solos, Duets, Quartets, Part-songs and Gleees from Modern and Standard Works. A programme that will appeal to all musical lovers.

MEN'S MISSION BEGINS

Yesterday afternoon the Mission for the women of the West End concluded at St. Patrick's with the Papal Blessing and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. At 7 p.m. the Mission for the men of the parish began and the church was crowded to the doors. After the recitation of the Rosary of the Blessed Virgin a very eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. Fr. Coughlan, who took as his text "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul." The Masses at 6 and 8 o'clock this morning were attended by large congregations of men.

SEALING PLANE TO LEAVE TO-DAY

The sealing plane was all ready for the start of her flight over the ice-fields yesterday but the attempt had to be abandoned owing to unfavorable weather conditions. It was very thick during the day and a flight consequently would have been fruitless. Conditions to-day are excellent and the plane was to leave for her first flight over the ice this forenoon. A trial flight was made on Saturday and proved very satisfactory.
